WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Temporary Employees are Entitled to Safe Workplaces

According to estimates from market and consumer data company Statista, there were approximately 16 million temporary employees in the United States in 2019. There is evidence from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that temporary employment rates are on the upswing and will continue to grow.

OSHA's Top Ten Workplace Safety Violations for 2020

Each year, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) publishes a list of the top ten most frequently cited workplace safety and health violations. Year in and year out the same violations top the list, indicating just how badly employers need to improve when it comes to protecting employees from preventable hazards and substandard, unsafe working conditions. You can read more about last year's top ten safety violations below.

PRODUCTS LIABILITY

What are the Hazards of Accidental Machine Startup?

Workers in manufacturing and food production are often called on to adjust heavy machinery that gets clogged or jammed. Safety protocols typically require machinery to be shut down and isolated from energy sources during maintenance. The hazards of accidental machine startup during maintenance activities include amputation, crushed fingers or limbs, electrocution, and other serious injuries. Tragically, some employers violate safety standards for the sake of convenience and saving money.

How Dangerous are Falls from Lower Heights?

It is well known that roofers, construction workers, and other employees who perform tasks at high heights risk serious personal injuries from falling. However, falls from lower heights can be extremely dangerous as well, resulting in painful medical conditions that may prevent workers from earning a living in their chosen profession. Defective or unsafe stairways, platforms, or ladders often cause falls from lower heights.

CAR ACCIDENTS

What Risks are Faced by Road Maintenance Crews?

Road maintenance crews employed by state and local agencies continually face risks of being struck by passing motorists, resulting in serious personal injury that is sometimes fatal. Everyone who travels by car or truck depends on the services provided by road crews to keep highways safe. To avoid car accidents, drivers should exercise patience and caution when they see workers on the roadways doing their job. When accidents occur, a seasoned car accident lawyer should be contacted to investigate the cause of the crash and represent those who have been injured through no fault of their own.
