NURSING HOME NEGLECT

Primary Cause of Bedsores

According to the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ), more than 2.5 million people in the United States develop pressure ulcers, or bedsores, each year. Bedsores are injuries to the skin and underlying tissue that result from sustained pressure on the skin. They are accompanied by an array of medical complications; some of these complications, such as cellulitis and sepsis, can be fatal.

Fall Prevention in Hospitals and Nursing Homes: How Providers Can Limit Adverse Events

Falls are some of the most common injuries that patients sustain in a hospital setting. According to the National Center for Biotechnology Information (NCBI), roughly 700,000 patient falls occur in American hospitals every year, leading to 250,000 injuries and 11,000 deaths. Approximately 1 in 4 patient falls result in injury, with 10% resulting in serious ones.

Fire Safety: Burn Awareness Week and New Federal Safety Standards for Flammable Liquids

To protect consumers from burn injuries related to flammable liquids, the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) is making gas cans and other portable fuel containers safer by requiring manufacturers to equip them with flame mitigation devices. This move comes on the heels of an important national campaign; the federal agency promoted fire safety vigilance in observance of Burn Awareness Week, which ran from February 5-11.
