WORKPLACE INJURIES

Did You Suffer Injuries After a Scaffolding Accident or Fall at Work?

Scaffolding accidents can result in some of the most tragic and debilitating injuries. Workers injured while performing their duties can seek Workers' Compensation benefits from their employer. These benefits cover medical bills and a portion of lost wages. In many cases, Workers' Compensation does not cover the full extent of an employee's injury and damages. There are numerous situations where a worker can experience a scaffolding accident due to the negligence of a third party.

Reports Reveal New Injury and Fatality Data

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), there was a 5.7% increase in workplace fatalities from 2021 to 2022. Although other reports have highlighted some positive workplace safety trends, like a significant downturn in work-related amputations that same calendar year, the BLS' most up-to-date data indicates some highly problematic developments in the face of workplace safety. In addition to the high fatality rate, the agency also observed a 7.5% growth in the number of injuries and illnesses reported by employers; altogether, there were 2.8 million.

CAR ACCIDENTS

What Are the Most Common Types of Car Accidents in Philadelphia?

A mix of major highways and tight city streets bring residents and visitors into the heart of Philadelphia. The city is home to four of Pennsylvania's top 10 most dangerous road segments and several notoriously dangerous intersections. As a result, various car accidents happen throughout Philadelphia every day. Philadelphia car accidents range from minor fender benders to catastrophic multi-vehicle pileups.
