WORKPLACE INJURIES

Occupational Safety: Train New Workers to Prevent Injuries

A recent review of more than 1.2 million workers' compensation claims from 2016 to 2020 found that more than one-third of workplace injuries occur during an employee's first year on the job. Altogether, millions of missed workdays and millions of preventable injuries occurred during the four-year period. The largescale review draws attention to an important, yet all too often overlooked point: that increasing and improving training efforts for employees – particularly new employees – is an excellent way to promote safety in the workplace.

FALL ACCIDENTS

Can I File a Premises Liability Claim if I Slip and Fall at Work?

Pennsylvania workers in multiple industries face inherent risks on the job every day. According to the CDC, slip and fall accidents cause the death of nearly 40,000 Americans every year. Many slip and falls happen on job sites or while completing work-related tasks. Often, workers will speak to their employer about filing a Workers' Compensation claim. However, if you slip and fall at work, there is a chance that other negligent parties are responsible for your accident and injury.

DRIVING SAFELY

Is Your Teen Driver Ready for a Safe School Year?

Students across Pennsylvania are getting ready to go back to school, including teen drivers. Many high school students are excited to be driving themselves to school for the first time. A new school year brings many changes and challenges, but ensuring student drivers are safe on the road should be a priority. If you are the parent of a student driver, now is a good time to review some road rules with your teen.
