Product Recalls Are Rising—But Many Injuries Occur Long Before a Recall Is Issued

Consumers often assume that if a product is dangerous, it will be quickly removed from the market. Unfortunately, recent data suggests otherwise.

According to a new consumer safety report, product recalls reached their highest level since 2007, with 420 recalls issued in 2025 and hundreds of injuries linked to recalled products. While those numbers are concerning, they reveal an even more troubling reality: many consumers are injured months or even years before a recall is announced.

Summer Pool and Water Park Safety: Protecting Your Family During the Season of Fun

As temperatures rise, families across Pennsylvania flock to swimming pools, splash pads, lakes, and water parks to cool off and enjoy the summer months. While these activities can create lasting memories, they also come with serious risks. Every year, preventable accidents at pools and water parks result in severe injuries, near-drownings, and tragic fatalities.
