Can You Sue the Commonwealth, SEPTA, a Municipality, or Another Government Agency in Pennsylvania?

Injuries caused by the negligence of a government agency or employee can raise very different legal issues than an ordinary personal injury claim.

Pennsylvania law provides certain government entities with protections known as sovereign or governmental immunity. Those protections do not always prevent an injured person from bringing a claim. Pennsylvania law recognizes specific exceptions that may allow a lawsuit to proceed.

Limited Tort vs. Full Tort in Pennsylvania: What Are You Really Giving Up?

When you buy auto insurance in Pennsylvania, you are asked to choose between full tort and limited tort. Many drivers choose limited tort because it can lower their insurance premium. But do you know what you may be giving up in exchange for those savings?

The difference may not seem important—until you are injured in an accident.
